LOITERING FORBIDDEN.

Mayor Is Enforcing the Law Against Streeters.

Mayor Dillion today issued the following proclamation concerning the loitering and street walking that means the low women must keep off the streets and alleys:

MAYOR'S PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS an ordinance of the Village of Logan, Ohio, passed Nov. 11, 1890 and now in full force and effect, provides that loitering, strolling on the streets or other public places of said Village by any person known to be a common prostitute or who is in the habit of practicing prostitution, without a just reason or excuse therefor and,

WHEREAS said ordinance makes it unlawful for any person or persons to conduct themselves in any lewd or lascivious manner within the corporate limits of said Village and,

WHEREAS said ordinance makes it unlawful for any male person to be found within the limits of the corporation loitering or in company with any female person of ill repute for prostitution, without a just or reasonable excuse, and

WHEREAS said ordinance provides for the punishment of all persons violating said ordinance by a fine of not more than $20.00.

THEREFORE, I, J. E. Dillion, Mayor of said Village hereby proclaim that as Mayor of said Village I will prosecute any and all violations of said ordinance and order the police to strictly enforce the same.

J. E. DOLLISON, Mayor of the Village of Logan, Ohio.

REPUBLICAN COMMITTEE ELECTION.

On Saturday the "get-together" leaders of the Republican party of Hocking held the alleged committee election, since which time no person has been able to tell just who are elected. In Logan about three Republicans to a precinct came to the meetings and H. F. Ambrose was declared elected in the First Ward, W. S. Larimer in the Second, Sen. White in the Third and Frank Thurness in the Fourth; three for White and one "square-dealer." It is said that the county split, with 14 to each faction.

Now comes a big bunch of Republicans of Logan and a large fraction in Ward township, headed by E. H. Chatfield, that positively declare war on the agreement of the few leaders, and say they will not stand for any getting together that spells John White in the saddle. Chatfield says that whenever White is about licked he seeks compromise, and the other factional leaders are easy enough to "get-together" with him, when they have a chance to defeat him.

Mr. Chatfield has called a central committee election in Ward township for May 26, and says, Ward will operate politics independent of the rest of the county. He claims the balance of power in that township and will make it warm for the fellows who are running things.

Saloon License.

All saloon men in Logan, except Brandt and Lohr have made application for license for six months. Five dropped out in Murray City, and both in Laurville made application for license.

The ladies of the M. E. Church, living in the Second ward, will give a market Saturday, May 19, an Comly's grocery. Home made bread, cakes, pies and doughnuts will be for sale.

The Logan Orchestra will give another informal dance next Wednesday evening May 23, at 8 p. m. All dancers are cordially invited. Ladies free. The full orchestra of 9 pieces will be present. Mr. Harry Rose floor manager. Dance will be held at Red Mens Hall.

A Life For a Life.

A well known man was recently saved from death by a mouse. One of these troublesome little pests was nibbling in the room where the gentleman slept. A trap was set. In the night the mouse came, the bait was seized and the trapdoor fell with a crash. The man awoke to find the room full of gas, which had escaped from a half turned burner. The nicest part of this story (which is a true one) is that the gentleman said he believed that a life demanded another life. Consequently the mouse was released with only a sprained paw. Let us hope that the incident taught him to beware of traps in the future, no matter how good the cheese smells.

Teaching the Cub.

A man was going over the Rocky mountains for pine logs, driving a wagon. On the top of a large rock by the side of the road was a young bear, the mother having started up the mountain on the approach of the team. The cub not moving, the mother came bounding back to it and, giving it a push with her nose, started up the mountain again, expecting the cub to follow. But the little one made no move. The old bear then came back the second time and, taking up the cub in her paws, gave him two or three severe cuffs. The cub then obeyed orders and followed the old bear in a gallop up the side of the mountain.

Best of All.

"Twice a brown little, plain little, thin little book;
In passing you hardly would give it one look.
But the children all loved it, 'Because,' they all cried,
'Tis full of nice stories; 'tis lovely inside!"

"Twice a brown little, plain little, thin little girl;
Her nose was a failure, her hair wouldn't curl.
But the children all loved her, 'Because,' they all cried,
'She's so kind and so bright and so lovely inside!"

—Minnie Leona Upton in Youth's Companion

It described his cheese.
The girl asked the polite salesman if he had good cheese.
"We have some lovely cheese," was the smiling answer.
"You should not say lovely cheese," she corrected.
"Why not? It is," he declared.
"Because"—with boarding school dignity—"lovely should be used to qualify only something that is alive."
"Well," he retorted, "I'll stick to lovely."—New York Press.

HEROIC TREATMENT.

The Remedies That Are Used by the Doctors of China.

Chinese doctors seem to delight in heroic measures.

In several diseases, notably rheumatism, neuralgia, gout, ulcers, carbuncles and diarrheal complaints, they are very successful. The method in treating these troubles seems to be a liberal use of hot teas and broths and a relinquishment of all other foods. In most of the foods there is the simple tonic, ginseng. In others there are aperients which are apparently impure epsom salts. One broth contained peppermint leaves, chopped almonds, bay leaves, honey, blood and wine.

The idea seems to be to drench the entire system with hot water, washing out the body in that way, and relying upon the elements added to the water for medicinal action as well as nourishment.

Their treatment of most forms of dyspepsia is truly heroic. The patient is laid at full length and the doctor with his muscular hands pinches the body. The pinching is done with the thumb and forefinger. The method, though cruel, has excellent results, and there is immediate relief and a speedy cure.

For catarrhal troubles they use warm solutions of astringents, rendered aseptic by peppermint and similar oil, and where there is pain, as in nasal catarrh, they use oil, in which is put a tincture of opium.

For some forms of dyspepsia they burn paper. The paper burned is a thick yellow tissue, which when burned leaves a fluffy black ash, which is probably one-half carbon and the rest silica and mineral salts. Occasionally they write talismanic characters with colored pencils on the paper. Different pencils are used, and each is made of a different substance, which when burned exercises a chemical or medicinal influence.

When it is burned and diffused in a cup of tea the ingredients pass into the stomach along with the carbon of the paper.—Kansas City Independent.

The Coconut Crab.

The coconut crab is one of the oddest specimens of the whole crab family. He lives in the south islands and makes a diet of coconuts. This species has a pair of front legs terminated with a strong pair of pincers, and it is with these that he husks the nuts and breaks through the weakest portion of the shell. The crab begins by tearing the husk, fiber by fiber, and always at the end where the eyeholes of the nut are situated, that being the weakest place in the shell. When the husk has been removed the crab commences hammering the shell with his heavy claw and soon makes an opening, through which he extracts the meat of the nut. Darwin, writing of this crab, says, "I think this is as curious a case of instinct as I ever heard of, especially in structures so remote from each other in the scheme of nature as a coconut and a crab."

Their Range of Talk.

Challemel Lacour, the French statesman, used to tell a story about Schopenhauer, the German philosopher, whom he greatly admired. He had an appointment with him one day at a Frankfurt hotel and found him just finishing dinner at the table d'hôte. There were several officers at the table, and in front of Schopenhauer lay a gold piece. He said to the Frenchman as he rose and put the coin into his pocket: "I have had this gold piece on the table every evening for a month, having made up my mind to give it to the poor the first time these officers here spoke on some other topic at table besides promotion, horses or women. I have the money still."

Unexpected.

The street car conductor nerved himself for the approaching battle. "Madam," he said, stepping alongside the elderly passenger with the aggressive nose, thin lips and sharp chin, "you'll have to pay fare for that boy."

"Certainly," she answered, opening her purse and taking out a coin. "I expected to pay for him, sir. Do I look like a person that would try to beat the company out of 3 cents?"

"Madam," he gasped, "you do! That's what fooled me!"—Chicago Tribune.

My Hair is Scraggly

Do you like it? Then why be contented with it? Have to be? Oh, no! Just put on Ayer's Hair Vigor and have long, thick hair; soft, even hair; beautiful hair, without a single gray line in it. Have a little pride. Keep young just as long as you can.

"I am fifty-seven years old and until recently my hair was very gray. But in a few weeks Ayer's Hair Vigor restored the natural color to my hair so now there is not a gray hair to be seen."—J. W. HANSON, Boulder Creek, Cal.

A WIND HARP.

One That Is Quite Musical and Not Hard to Build.

Aeolus, the god of the winds, claimed the wind harp as his own, but since he never obtained a patent on his instrument there is no law against appropriating his invention. Its construction is very simple, and with a little care an instrument can be produced whose music is far more sweet than the ordinary door harp.

To make a wind harp procure a box made of thin, well seasoned wood—pine preferred—about four inches high and six inches wide. Cut a circular hole in the top and sandpaper the rough edges. This is your sounding board. Across each end of the box and on top fasten a slat of oak or some other hard wood, a quarter of an inch thick and one inch wide. In one of these slats drive seven flat headed tacks equidistant from each other, and in the other slat fix the same number of twisting screws, such as are used in banjos. From these stretch your strings, which should be all the same size and of catgut. The "G" guitar string will be found the best for this purpose. Now tune all the strings in unison, and the harp is completed. It is, however, well to add a reflector to throw out the sound. This is easily accomplished by placing a thin board above the box, supporting it on sticks fitting into notches, which are glued in the corners of the box. The reflector answers as a shield to prevent injury to the harp.

Place the harp in a current of air, as upon the sill of a half open window. The sound produced by the wind passing over the strings has a rising and falling of a drowsy, lulling character and extremely melodious.

THE DIVING BELL.

How the First One Made by Dr. Halley Was Operated.

It was nearly 200 years ago that Edmund Halley constructed what is often referred to as the first diving bell, although the apparatus must have been much like that which was previously exhibited in the presence of Charles V., says the Technical World Magazine.

The principle of the diving bell is simple. An inverted jar sunk in the water retains air at its top, and if there is enough air men may live and breathe and work there and keep dry. Dr. Halley's diving bell was a large wooden chamber open at the bottom and loaded there with lead to prevent it from turning in the water. Pieces of glass set in the roof furnished light. Air was supplied by an ingenious method, for leaded casks full of air were sent down, hung downward. Tipping the barrel, water would rush into it and drive out the air to the man in the bell chamber.

At the depth of thirty-three feet the air is compressed to half its former bulk, and the bell is therefore at that depth half filled with water, and as the depth increases so do the compression and the pressure.
